

SUCCESS

Success - what is it? Success in what? Success is merely a word of the human mind. Who defines success? What is success for you today may not be success for you, tomorrow. Success is a word you use, to describe a particular experience. You could use any alternative word for it? Is it not?

Human beings always attribute words to the experiences they create. It is a product of the mind and comes from past conditioning of thoughts and beliefs.

Have you noticed that, success means different things for different people? It also varies depending upon cultures and different age brackets.

The word Success is an imprint created by human cultures to denote certain experiences. From earliest times - success means - conquest, winning, power over others, control and all other debilitating experiences humans inflict on others.

In earliest times, killing an animal was considered a success like a successful hunt. This evolved into seeking control over others or a situation. This cultural fallacy is carried forward from generations to generations.

And these cultural notions are strengthened with each generation and we teach this to our young ones. Moment to moment you are creating experiences. Some moments, it produces a result, you were looking for and in some, it does not produce a result you were seeking. So, you are in the process of continually creating experiences - successive experiences.

Take a moment to pause to think about success - what it means to you? Are you defined by the success you seek or gained? Are you seeking this definition of yourself from others by the success you think you have? What defines you?

The old cultural paradigm in defining success is about possessions.

The more things you possess, in worldly terms, you are looked at being successful. Is it a true reality of your Soul Expression?

The Soul seeks to express itself in the knowing of itself and in beingness. When the soul does this, there is expression of Joy and Love and for the Soul this the greatest happiness. So, can we have a new definition of Success?

Whenever joy is created as a true expression of who we are, we can call it as Success. So, ask yourself daily - how many moments in a day - you express this quality of your soul?

When you change your mind set about worldly success, and look at the expression of your soul, and it becomes a natural part of you, worldly success will naturally follow, for from a place of beingness, you will naturally create what produces joy and the energy of Joyful expression will naturally flow back to you.

True success is in the joyful celebration of your life. In the remembrance of who you are.
