

NATURE OF THE UNIVERSE

Today our guest will be Sister Nandiyani. She was a very aware disciple of mine and went on to teach many young women about life and the fleeting nature of the universe.

Nandiyani here

I place my head at the lotus feet of my beloved teacher Lord Buddha. My teacher taught many things. He observed nature and said nature has great wisdom. And this wisdom is available to all.

One morning, others and I gathered around his lotus feet to hear his teachings. Then it began to rain. He told us to look at the rain and to observe the drops of rain. He said that these drops were water before and now it is circulating again as rain.

In the similar way, our life is the cosmic ocean of life and our present life stream is one drop of the great ocean of our life.

We return to this great ocean at the end of each life. When we return, what are we returning with? With our return, will the cosmic ocean be less pure. He asked us to contemplate on this.

Our thoughts and actions, if not checked, can become impure. This impurity, we take with us and we add this into the cosmic ocean, and so we recycle it back into our life stream.

He taught us always to be mindful in everything we do and taught us that our life should be like a polished mirror which reflects the inner light of our Soul.

When we were with him, everyone aspired to be like him. He understood this and taught us that there is no difference between him and all who seek to be like him.

He taught us that all are expressions of Light and all expressions of Light has a mission to serve and to honor our own individuality and accept our own unique expression of our life.

He taught us that when we compare ourselves, we are dishonoring our inner light and this makes us unhappy and many a time, causes us to feel jealousy, hatred, critical and violent.

He taught us that we must accept our own uniqueness. He taught us that in a flower garden, all are beautiful expressions of God and the combined uniqueness of each flower makes the garden more beautiful.

In the similar way, our uniqueness creates the most beautiful tapestry in the garden of life on Mother Earth's body.

He also taught us about stars, galaxies, our other realities (to some of the advanced disciples).

One of the most unique quality I found within my master was the ability to harmonize in any environment and with all people - from the person on the street to the nobility who came to see him. He spoke to them at the level they can relate to him.

In this way, he befriended everyone who came to him. Everyone felt uplifted in his presence.

People walked for days to be in his presence and when they met him, they were uplifted by his loving presence. He made sure that all who came to see him from far and after walking much, were given food and water. He cared for everyone.

This was one of the noble qualities I learned from him. To treat each individual with love and respect.

So, during my own teaching experiences I tried to emulate this noble quality with all.

I came back to the earth three times after that life stream. Once in Europe, once in Russia and once in middle America. I will return once again in another fifty years to this glorious Earth.

In eternal gratitude to my beloved teacher - Lord Buddha,
I will partake my leave now.
