

RELATIONSHIP

Relationship is defined as two or more beings in joining together in any format - whether it be personal as in romantic relationship or relationship with other sentient beings or an experience. Here, we talk about relationship between two human beings.

True relationship should be based on agreement between the two parties, where both the parties come together in honoring the agreement, they have made. If the relationship starts with consensual attraction and is honored with caring and mutual respect, then the relationship is off to a good start.

Relationship gives you an opportunity to express a larger part of your Soul's consciousness. What does it mean? Without another person, whether in a relationship or otherwise, you cannot express and experience what you intrinsically know as the greater qualities of your Soul.

Relationship gives you a contextual field to express your infinite ness in a finite way.

Coffee with Master Buddha
Channeled Irhaan Rae Chandran
31st July 2020

Your soul is always looking for ways to express what it is - love and other expressions of it and this it achieves through other people in your life and also with all other people you come in contact with - whether it be a beggar or anyone else who steps into your life.

True relationship can only be experienced fully, when one is fully in relationship with oneself.

Relationship with Oneself should be and must be the number one relationship on your life. This does not mean we discard or do not care about other people on our lives. It simply means - one is in Love with self fully, and is complete with in oneself fully, since they are divine soul and they are aware of it. From this fullness with in themselves, they willingly share their fullness with all.

Take a moment to pause - and ask - what is the intent of my relationship (if you are in a relationship)? Is it based in mutual respect and love or for any other reason? Be honest with yourself.

There are three types of relationship human beings seek.

Relationship on the Physical level, the Mental level and the Emotional level.

Which category does your relationship fall? Can a relationship be based on all these levels?

Physical level attraction is based on the body level.

Mental level attraction is based on one's perception or thought forms.

Emotional level attraction is based on one's fear and security issues.

Rarely these three attractions bring you the joy and happiness you seek - yes, temporarily, but not in a lasting reality. Now there is another relationship - that is based on one's Soul Truth and Soul Integrity. When one is fully present with in their soul awareness, then the relationship mirrors their divinity with the other person and vice-verse. Now there are Soul groups or Soul Pods, in which a group of souls incarnate together and relationships from these soul groups will always mirror the highest divinity with each other.

Coffee with Master Buddha
Channeled Irhaan Rae Chandran
31st July 2020

This is the highest form of relationship in which both parties Honour and respect each other. There is a level of complete acceptance of the other person.

Relationships are great teachers. Many a time, we draw forth people based on our past experiences with them. (Karma). Both parties meet to balance past karmic energies.

These are called Soul Contracts between two people. As you grow in awareness, this soul contracts will slowly shift to Soul Agreements in which both parties start doing things, which brings joy to both parties and there is no control issue.

To improve an existing relationship, both parties touch the thumb and index finger of each other and make a loop or circle. Be in this position for three minutes silently breathing while keeping the eyes closed.

This will create an energetic loop between both of you. Thumb represents the God force within you and index finger represent the wisdom within you. When you are full within yourself, you will be in fullness with others.